“...it’s a chance to verify the fact they [students] really want to be a doctor, a lawyer, or a teacher. Since I am currently planning on studying journalism in college, it seemed a perfect fit to intern here at The Leader....the co-op experience has allowed me to verify the fact that journalism is where I need to be. It has even helped me in being accepted to colleges as many are impressed with the level of work I’ve been exposed to thus far this year.”

Information for Parents and Students

Corning-Painted Post School District's Career Exploration and Internship Program (CEIP) gives high school juniors and seniors the chance to try out career interests before the students and their parents invest hard-earned money into college or other

Benefits to students:

Students are mentored by

Students see the connection between school and work, learning firsthand what kinds of knowledge, skills and education are re-

Students, through this program, develop a good work ethic.

Students establish positive contacts with the local business community.

About the CEIP Program:

Students may participate in their junior or senior year.

Students can earn 1/2 or 1 credit toward graduation

All internships are non-paid—although it's not unusual for internships to lead to paid positions.

*Students must apply for acceptance into the CEIP program. All participants in the CEIP Program are enrolled in the course called Working Worlds while they are in the program.*
